

A close-up portrait of a woman with blonde hair, resting her chin on her hand. She is looking directly at the camera with a slight smile. The lighting is soft, highlighting her features. The background is a plain, light-colored wall.

My first version of something

Por: Claudinha

Winter in Brasília

It's winter time in Brasília.

The weather is really dry and many people suffer from respiratory diseases in this season.

The green grass turns to gray due to the low humidity.

Although the dry weather can affect your health, it's only in winter that you can see Yellow Cortez blossoms.

Those trees are really beautiful. They are admired wherever people go in Brasília.

Yellow Cortez

(Tabebuia ochracea)

"A native hardwood tree of the dry forests of Central and South America, its blossoms also make it a common ornamental. These trees bloom in Costa Rica's dry season, when it is easier for their pollinators to fly from tree to tree. Generally, all of the individuals in a given area bloom simultaneously, an event that lasts about four days and fills the forest with an explosion of color. Visited by much wildlife, from butterflies, beetles and wasps to hummingbirds, howler monkeys and kinkajous, the Yellow Cortez is an important component of tropical dry forest ecology. This exuberant tree is also a good alternative for reforestation projects that promote biological corridors and beauty.

Source: <http://costaspirit.com/feature21-local-wildlife-the-yellow-cortez.html>

digite aqui

digite aqui

digite aqui

Next time you come to Brasília, look up and admire the Yellow Cortezes.

You will see that they bring happiness to the dry land!