The standard schnauzer is a dog breed originating in Germany. This canine is what might be called the "original" because it was he who gave the giant and miniature. Second publication in the book The Complete Dog Book, the schnauzer was the result of crosses between pinchers, which generated a variation of the hard. After World War II, the standard lost popularity for its miniature version. Appreciated as a guard dog is smarter than the giant, occupying ten positions forward in the list prepared by Stanley Coren. Maurício de Souza was inspired to create Schnauzer in one of its most charismatic characters. Dog Franklin is energetic and has the hard.

The origin of Lhasa Apso was lost for a long time. It is an ancient breed created and revered in the villages and monasteries of Tibet. Her story is interwoven with the Buddhist beliefs, including belief in reincarnation. Despite its appearance of lap dog, the Lhasa has a temper. He is independent, stubborn and courageous.
